Plant Genome I was held 12 years ago in November 1992. In January 1997, the conference expanded its remit (to include livestock), becoming Plant and Animal Genome V. The conference has included plant and animal genome sessions every year since then. Each year the attendee numbers grow and at least one research group breaks the news of a significant achievement at the conference, indicating its importance to each of the communities holding workshops there. Abstracts from all of the past meetings are available for searching from the PAG website: <http://www.intl-pag.org/>
